STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS

The Land Acquisition Act, 1894 (the Act) has been an effective instrument for the acquisition of land for public purposes and also for companies, yet its provisions have been found to be inadequate in addressing certain issues related to the exercise of the statutory powers of the State for involuntary acquisition of private land and property.

2. Often, such acquisition of land leads to displacement of people, depriving them of their livelihood and shelter, restricting access to their traditional resource base, and uprooting them from their socio-cultural environment. These have traumatic, psychological and socio-cultural consequences for the affected population, which call for protecting their rights, including those of the weaker sections of society, particularly tribals, tenants, etc. Rehabilitation and resettlement of the persons and families affected by involuntary acquisition of private land and immovable property is of paramount importance. Thus, it is necessary to extend the provisions of the extant policies or statutes for rehabilitation and resettlement of those affected by the acquisition of land under the Act.

3. Also, the ambit of the expression "person interested" under the Act is proposed to be expanded so as to include tribals and other traditional forest dwellers, who have lost any traditional rights recognised under the Scheduled Tribes and Other Traditional Forest Dwellers (Recognitions of Forest Rights) Act, 2006 (2 of 2007). Moreover, it is necessary to ensure that persons having tenancy rights under the relevant State laws are included under the scope of "person interested".

4. Although the Land Acquisition Act provides for acquisition of land for public purpose, the expression "public purpose" has not been defined. Hence, the necessity of defining "public purpose", so as to restrict the scope of land acquisition under the Act to provision of land for strategic purposes vital to the state, and for infrastructure projects where the benefits accrue to the general public is essential.

5. The provision of the Act are also used to acquire private lands for companies. This frequently raises a question mark on the desirability of such state intervention when land could be arranged by the company through private negotiations on a "willing seller-willing buyer" basis, which could be seen to be a more fair arrangement from the point of view of the land owner. In view of this it is desirable to omit the provisions for the acquisition of land for companies under the Act. However, under certain circumstances, it may be necessary to acquire some land through statutory mechanism to the extent of a limited portion of the total area of the land required when the "person" has already purchased the rest of the land through private negotiations and the purpose is useful to the general public. Such "person" may include any company or association or body of individuals, whether incorporated or not.

6. Further, it has been the experience that a large number of disputes relating to land acquisition compensation are brought before the courts of law. Quite often these cases remain pending for long periods of time in the courts. Such cases also add to the workload of the courts, which are generally over-burdened with cases other than land acquisition matters. Thus, it would be desirable that the jurisdiction of civil courts is barred for the purposes of the land acquisition compensation disputes and other alternate mechanisms created for disposal of such disputes in a time-bound manner.

7. Also, it is desirable to make the various steps of the land acquisition process time-bound, so that the entire process can be completed within a reasonable period of time. This will be in the interest of the land owners and farmers whose lands are acquired as well as the projects and requiring bodies.

8. Another area of concern in the application of the Act, so far, has been the requirement of providing a fair compensation at market value commensurate with the purpose for which the acquired land would be used. Certain provisions need to be introduced accordingly in the Act. In addition, in view of the involuntary nature of the acquisition, adequate solatium amount should be offered to the land owners, and the amount may be higher in cases of acquisition under urgency.

9. Often it is seen that the possession of land acquired is not taken over in time, and also there are delays in the payment of the compensation amount. Therefore, it is necessary to make a provision to ensure that physical possession of the land is taken over and the amount of compensation is paid within a defined period from the date of the compensation award under the Act.

10. Issues around the utilisation of the land acquired and their transfer are also areas of concern. Here, provisions are proposed to be made so that the land acquired is not transferred to any other purpose except for a public purpose, and that too, not without prior approval of the appropriate Government. When any land or part thereof, acquired under the Act remains unutilised for a defined period from the date of taking over possession, the same will return to the appropriate Government. Further, whenever any land acquired under the Act is transferred to any person for a consideration, a part of the net unearned income so accruing to the transferor, will be shared amongst the persons from whom the lands were acquired or their heirs, in proportion to the value at which the lands were acquired.

11. Bringing in suitable amendments to the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 on these lines will go a long way in striking a balance between the need for land for development and other public purposes and protecting the interests of the persons whose lands are statutorily acquired.

12. The Bill seeks to achieve the above objectives.

(2) Every order made under this section shall be laid, as soon as may be after it is made, before each House of Parliament.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Provision of public facilities or infrastructure often requires the exercise of powers by the State for acquisition of private property leading to displacement of people, depriving them of their land, livelihood and shelter, restricting their access to traditional resource base and uprooting them from their socio-cultural environment. These have traumatic, psychological and socio-cultural consequences on the affected population which call for protecting their rights, in particular of the weaker sections of the society including members of the Scheduled Castes, the Scheduled Tribes, marginal farmers and their families.

2. There is an imperative need to recognise rehabilitation and resettlement issues as intrinsic to the development process formulated with the active participation of affected persons and families. Additional benefits beyond monetary compensation have to be provided to families affected adversely by involuntary displacement. The plight of those who do not have rights over the land on which they are critically dependent for their subsistence is even worse. This calls for a broader concerted effort on the part of the planners to include in the displacement, rehabilitation and resettlement process framework, not only those who directly lose land and other assets but also all those who are affected by such acquisition of assets. The displacement process often poses problems that make it difficult for the affected persons to continue their old livelihood activities after resettlement. This requires a careful assessment of the economic disadvantages and the social impact of displacement. There must also be a holistic effort aimed at improving the all-round living standards of the affected people and families.

3. A National Policy on Resettlement and Rehabilitation for Project Affected Families was formulated in 2003, which came into force with effect from February, 2004. Experience gained in implementation of this policy indicates that there are many issues addressed by the policy which need to be reviewed. There should be a clear perception, through a careful quantification of the costs and benefits that will accrue to society at large, of the desirability and justifiability of each project. The adverse impact on affected families—economic, environmental, social and cultural—must be assessed in a participatory and transparent manner. A national rehabilitation and resettlement framework thus needs to apply to all projects where involuntary displacement takes place.

4. The aim is to minimise large-scale displacement, as far as possible. However, where large numbers of families are affected, it must be mandatory to do social impact assessments and provide all required infrastructural facilities and amenities in the resettlement area. More particularly, where the Scheduled Tribes people are being displaced in sizeable numbers, a well thought out Tribal Development Plan must be put in place. Furthermore, such a policy must specify clear timeframes within which the implementation of the rehabilitation package as well as utilisation of the land shall be accomplished. Also, it should lay down an effective monitoring and grievance redressal mechanism.

5. The National Rehabilitation and Resettlement Policy, 2007 has been formulated on these lines to replace the National Policy on Resettlement and Rehabilitation for Project Affected Families, 2003. The new policy has been notified in the Official Gazette and has become operative with effect from the 31st October, 2007. Since the inception of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 for the first time a legislation namely, the Rehabilitation and Resettlement Bill, 2007 has been developed on the lines of the provisions of the new policy, so as to give a statutory backing to them and provide for Social Impact Assessment, making of scheme and plans well defined Rehabilitation and Resettlement benefits for the affected families.

6. Many State Governments have their own rehabilitation and resettlement policies. Many Public Sector Undertakings or agencies also have their own policies in this regard. The Rehabilitation and Resettlement Bill, 2007 provides for the basic minimum requirements that all projects leading to involuntary displacement must address. The Bill contains a saving clause to enable the State Governments, Public Sector Undertakings or agencies, or other requiring bodies to continue to provide or put in place greater benefit levels than those prescribed under the Bill.

The Rehabilitation and Resettlement Bill, 2007 will be primarily applicable to the rehabilitation and resettlement of persons adversely affected by the acquisition of lands for projects. However, involuntary displacement of people may be caused by other factors also, and the provisions of the Bill may apply to the rehabilitation and resettlement of persons involuntarily displaced permanently due to any reason.

8. In brief, the Rehabilitation and Resettlement Bill, 2007 will provide for the basic minimum that all projects leading to involuntary displacement must address the grievances of the affected persons. A social impact assessment of proposals leading to displacement of large populations through a participatory, informed and transparent process involving all stake-holders, including the affected persons will be necessary before these are acted upon. The rehabilitation process would augment income levels and enrich quality of life of the displaced persons, covering rebuilding socio-cultural relationships, capacity building and provision of public health and community services. Adequate safeguards have been proposed for protecting rights of vulnerable sections of the displaced persons.

9. The Bill seek to achieve the above objectives.
